Fate of the Schooner Pearl. A Devli-Fish Sinks a Schooner with one of the Crew. From the India Homeward Mail. The following strange story has been communicated to us by James Floyd, the master of the oner Peurl: We had left Colombo in the steamer Strathowen. had rounded tralle, and were well in the bay, with our course laid for Madras, steaming over a calm and trat quil ees. About an hour before sunset or May 10th, we saw on our starboard beam, and about two miles off, a small schooner lying becalmed; there was nothing in her appearance or position to excite remark, but, as we came up with her, I laxily examined her with my binocular, and then noticed between its, and nearer her, a long, low swelling ly ing on the sea, which, from its shape, I took to be a teank of seaweed. As I watched, the mass bitherto at rest in the quiet sen was set in motion. It struck the schooner, which visibly reeled and then righted; immediately erwards the masts swayed sideways, and with my glass I could clearly discern the enorme the half of a the schooner coalescing-I can think of no other term. Judging from the exclamations, the other gazers must have witnessed the same appearance. Almost Immediately after the collision and coalescence the schooner's masta awayed toward us, lower and lower; the vessel was on her end, lay there a few seconds and disappeared, the masts eighting as she sank, and the main exhibiting a rerersed ensign struggling towards its peak. A cry of horror arose from the lookers on; and, us if by instinct, our ship's head was turned toward the scene, which was marked by the forms of those buttling for life-the sole survivors of the pretty little schooner which only twenty minutes before floated bravely on ne smooth sea. As soon as the poor fellows were able to tell their story, they astounded us with the assertion that their vessel and been submerged by a gigantic cuttle fish or calauary, the animal which, in a smaller form, attracts so much attention in the Brighton Aquarium as the Octopus. Each nurrator had his ersion of the story, but in the main all the narratives tailled so remarkably as to leave no doubt of the fact.

As soon as he was at leisure, I prevailed on he skipper to give me his written account of the disaster, and I have now much pleasure in sending you a copy of his narrative: "I was lately th ski per of the schooner Pearl, 150 tons as tight a utile craft as ever sailed the seas, with a crew of six men. We were bound from Mauritins to flangoun in ballest to return with paidy, and had put in at Gaile for water. Three days out we were becalmed in the bay (lat. 8 deg. 50 min. N., long. 84 deg. 5 min. E.); on May 19th, about 5 P. M., (I know eight bells had gone), we signted a two musted screw on our port quarter, about five or six miles off; very soon after, as we lay motionless, a great mass showly rose out of the sea, about halt a mile off, on our larboard side, and remained spread out as it were and stationary; it looked like the back of a huge whale, but it sloped less, and was of a brownish color; even at that distance it seemed much onger than our craft, and it seemed to be basking · What's that ?' I sung out to the mate. 'Blest if I knows; barring it's size, color and shape, it might be a whale,' replied Tom Scott. 'And it ain't a sea scrient,' said one of the crew, 'for he's loc round for that ere crittur.' I went into the cubin for my rifle, and as I was preparing to fire, Bill Dar ling, a Newfoundlander, came on deck, and looking at the monster, excluded, putting up his hand, 'Have a care, mister; that ere's a squid, and will capelze us if you hurt him.' Smiling at the idea, I let fly and hit him, and with that he shook, and there was a great ripple all round nim and be began to move. 'Out with all your axes and kniv s.' shouted Bill, 'and cut at any part of him that comes aboard; look alive, and the Lord help us?' Not aware of the danger, and never having seen or heard of such a monster, I gave no orders, and it was no use touching the helm or ropes to get out off the way. By this time three of the crew, Bill included, had found axes and one rusty cutlass, and all were looking over the ship's side at the advancimg monster.

by Jerks just under the surface of the water, and an enormous train following; the oblong body was at least half the size of our vessel in length and just as thick; the wake or train might have been 100 feet long. In the time I have taken to write this the brute struck us, and the ship quivered under the thud; in another moment, monstrous arms like tree seized the vessel, and she heeled over; in snother second the monster was abourd, squeezed in between the two masts, Bill screaming, 'Slash for your lives;' but all our slashing was of no avail, for the brute, holding on by his arms, slipt his vast body overboard, and pulled the vessel down with him on her beam ends. We were thrown into the water at once; and, just as I went over I caught sight of one of the crew, either Bill or Tom Fielding, squashed up between the must and one of those awful arms. For a few seconds our ship lay on her beam ends,

"We could now see the huge oblong mass moving up five. The rest you know. I can't tell who ran up the enshen."

Verdict under the Civil Damage Act. The constitutionality of the civil damage act has igst been affirmed in a decision given by John Armstrong, County Judge of Queen's county, in the esse of Maria Tilly against a saloon keeper mined Tobias Lawrence, both parties residing in Washington. Mrs. Tilly last Winter sued Lawrence for selling whisky to her husband, in consequence of which her busband got drunk, got into a row and received some injury. The case was tried before a justice, and the jury gave Mrs. Tilly $50 and costs, Lawrence appealed to the County Court, and the case was argoed on the 7th of March, the main points of the appeal being as to the constitutionality of the law, counsel arguing that the National Constitution provides that no State shall pass a law to impair the validity of contracts, and that the license to sell liquir is a contract between the State and the dealer, his deciaion, which was reserved until now, Judge

Armstrong says; "The act in question is not a prohibition to sell, but is a regulation, and within the police powers of the State. Neither can it be said that the ilcense granted the defendant is a contract so far as to ineriere with subsequent legislation. The Court of Appeals, lu the case of the Metropollian Board of Excise vs. Bain (84 N. Y., 657), says: "These licenses to sell liquor are not contracts between the State and the person licensed, g'ving the latter vested rights protected on general principles, and by the Constitution of the United States against subse quent legislation, nor are they property in any legal or constitutional sense. They have neither the qualitles of a contract por of property, but are merely temporary permits to do what would otherwise be an offense against the general law. They form a part of the luternal police system of the State, are lesued in the exercise of its police powers, and are ant-ject to the direction of the State Government, which may modify or continue as it may deem fit. The judgment appealed from must be affirmed with

It is understood that a number of other cases in the same neighborhood, held in abeyance pending this decision, will now probably be brought to im. mediate trial.
